RTF 584 Seminar: Bourdieu

Chuck Kleinhans

French sociologist Pierre Bourdieu had a very productive and wide ranging career. This seminar will examine his work in four areas of media analysis: a) Distinction, his analysis of the social nature of taste and consumption; b) his critique of Kantian aesthetics, the dominant theoretical basis of art analysis for the past 200 years; c) the concept of the Field of Art, or how art operates as a social institution, and d) the critique of neoliberalism and global capitalism.

While the course will center on working with Bourdieu's ideas as they apply to media culture, students from other visual arts, literature, theatre and drama, performance, philosophy, sociology, etc. can develop their research papers in terms of their special interests.

Along the way, we will consider how a student can understand a major thinker whose work is rich and diverse, particularly one whose career is grounded in a specific culture and society, how to disentangle the core ideas from the immediate and specific context of post WW2 France, and how to productively apply those ideas to different national contexts.

The course will begin with common core readings and how they can be applied to media culture. In addition to discussion, students will prepare short reports on other writings by Bourdieu and commentators on Bourdieu. Students will also prepare original research, with a first draft due the seventh week of class. That draft will be discussed and critiqued in class and rewritten as a final paper by the end of the course.
